Dear Friends,

What a remarkable journey this past year has been. In the small fishing community of Gloucester Massachusetts was born the simple idea that we cannot arrest our way out of the opiate epidemic. In just over a year PAARI has grown into a nationwide movement of law enforcement and service providers with a unified mission of providing compassionate access to treatment instead of arrest. To date, we have helped create more than 160 police-based programs nationwide, with new police departments joining every week.

We cannot thank you enough for your crucial support in creating this impact.

Our partners have saved thousands of lives but nearly 100 Americans die everyday from heroin and opioid overdoses and there is much work to be done. We hope you will partner with us to deepen and expand this transformative work in the year ahead.

Sincerely,

Our Model

Drug overdose is the leading cause of accidental death in the US. In 2014, there were 18,893 overdose deaths related to prescription painkillers and 10,574 overdose deaths from heroin. From 2001 to 2014 there was a 6-fold increase in the number of heroin-related deaths and a 3.4-fold increase in the number of deaths related to prescription opioids.

After a series of overdose deaths, in June 2015 the Gloucester Police Department launched the Angel Initiative, which promised that any individual walking into the police station to request help getting into treatment and recovery from opioid addiction would be immediately helped, not arrested.

Due to overwhelming interest in the program, the Police Assisted Addiction & Recovery Initiative (PAARI) was created as a 501(c)3 nonprofit organization that supports law enforcement agencies in establishing and running their own pre-arrest addiction and recovery programs to help more individuals into treatment and recovery. PAARI collaborates with stakeholders across various sectors to provide funding, training, access to treatment centers, nasal naloxone, and a network of like-minded law enforcement agencies.

Our Impact: Year One

Providing resources and training to 143 police departments and state agencies in 27 states to help them implement pre-arrest programs that connect opioid drug users to treatment.

Helping more than 400 individuals into treatment from the Gloucester Police Department alone, plus thousands more from other police departments across the country.

Communities that have joined PAARI have observed as much as a 25 percent reduction in crimes associated with addiction, cost savings by diverting people into treatment rather than triggering the criminal justice system, as well as an enormous increase in trust from their communities.

Partnering with more than 300 treatment centers in 20 states and securing hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of scholarships for treatment for individuals without insurance.

Distributing more than 5,000 doses of nasal naloxone, the life saving opioid-blocking drug that is used to treat overdoses.

Speaking to audiences from across the country and gaining national media attention to elevate this national epidemic to the forefront of the public's awareness, influence local and national policy, increase access to treatment, and reduce stigma.
